Bern, get ready (BEready) population-based cohort study for pandemic preparedness: main study

Hello! Do you want to take part in our research project?

We are a group of scientists. We want to find out how people and animals get poorly and how we can help stop this from happening.

We want you and your family to take part in our project because you live in the Canton of Bern.

If you do take part, we will measure how much you weigh and how tall you are, as well as how fast and strong your heart beat is.

We will also take a little bit of blood from your arm and finger. This might not feel very nice. We will put a cream or plaster on your arm so that it doesn't hurt when we take blood from your arm.

Every time somebody in your house gets a cold or flu, your parents will put a soft little stick inside your nose.

One time every year, your parents will have to take a few drops of blood from your finger.

If you take part, you might help other people to be better protected from getting poorly. But taking part in the project won't help you personally. You don't have to take part unless you and your parents want to. You and your parents can change your mind again at any time.
